

Most English speaking gardeners say, "nye-foe'-fee-a." Elsewhere it is usually pronounced, "nip-hoff-ee-a."

This group of plants has more diversity than is often realized. Although many grow between 3 and 4 feet in height, others grow less than 2 feet, while some get 6 feet tall. And their flowering seasons are not only in summer and fall, but also in spring, and even a few in winter

Sequim Rare Plants

(pronounced "skwim").

Our "mother plants" of these perennials are field grown to keep the different varieties from becoming mixed.

Because of the large number of varieties, we choose a limited selection to offer in any one year, and cycle through the whole list within a few short years .
